

HELP US TO WRITE ABOUT LANDSCAPES

Call for Volunteer Writers

6 February 2015 Deadline

The International Federation of Landscape Architects (IFLA) is looking for talented and motivated volunteer writers, reporters and investigative journalists interested in topics related to landscape architecture and design, sustainability and environmental challenges. Stories completed by the due date will be mainly published on web based media with opportunities to be published as well in newspapers, magazines, and newsletters.

Candidates must have high proficient writing and editing skills in English, web-based media knowledge and experience (e.g. wordpress), strong interviewing skills and knowledge on MS Office or similar. Media contacts are a plus.

Topics of interest

We're interested in exposes, news articles, interviews, and investigative reports concerning landscape architecture such as:

1. landscape, history, culture and identity
2. eco-cities and sustainable design solution
3. waterscapes
4. contemporary trends and innovative technologies
5. design for everyone
6. multi-diversity, ethnicity and design
7. social learning and community engagement
8. new research and methodologies
9. healthy cities and healthy lives
10. land art and temporary landscapes
11. environment and behaviour
12. regional planning, infrastructures
13. performance and mobility
14. international initiatives
15. review of landscape projects
15. victories, successes and inspirational stories

How to apply:

If you think you might be a good candidate for this role, send an email to communications@iflaonline.org containing the following as a single file (PDF or DOC):

1. Short CV with your qualifications and experience (max of 2 pages)
2. Motivation letter about why you want to write/work with us (max 1 page)
3. One writing sample (max 1 page) and/or a link to a blog or website if you have one

About IFLA:

IFLA, the world's only recognised international association for Landscape Architecture, representing students, educators and practitioners in driving a field that is achieving ever-greater prominence.

Founded in 1948 by the late, legendary Landscape Architect, Sir Geoffrey Jellicoe, IFLA is formed of national associations of Landscape Architects spanning six continents. The Federation marks the gold standard of education and practice concerning land use, design, urban, town and sectoral planning, infrastructure development, environmental protection, maintenance of parks and historic gardens.

IFLA
INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION
OF LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTS